CHILD TERRITORIES TO THE PARTY OF THE PARTY INVICORATING CORDIAL

FOR GENITAL DEBILITY, IMPOTENCY, INCONTINENCE, OR NOCTURNAL EMISSIONS, &c.—The astonishing success which has attended this invaluable medicine, for Loss of Mascular Energy, Physical Latinizde, and General Prostration, or any of the consequences of youthful indiscretion, or indulgance of the passion in riper years, runders it the most valuable preparation ever discovered. In fact, as a remedy for the abeve complaints, it stands univalled and aione. There is no other reliable remedy, or any that has authentically received the sanction of the Medical Faculty. The WONDERFUL VEGETABLE PREDUCTION of which this medicine is composed has been tested, and its virtues proclaimed, by the highest names of the faculty of Loudon, Paris, and the chief clies of Europe, as well as by eminent Physicians in tills country. It is the only infallible remedy for NERVOUS, HEAD, and MIND COMPLAINTS—the mental physic so long sought for and nover before found—the only again that can administer to MIND DISRASES. It will remove all nervous affections, DEPRESSION, EXCITEMENT, incapacity to study or business, less of MEMORY, CONFUSION, thoughts of self-destruction, fear of insanity, &c. It will restore the applicate, runew the health of those who have destroyed it by Sansual Excusses or evil practices. It has been said by some that these disorders, emissions, &c., were incurable. This, however, is not the fact.

DR. DE. JOHNSTON.

Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, Graduate from one of the most eminent Colleges of the United States, and the greater part of whose life has been spent in the Hospitals of London, Paris, Philadelphia, and elsewhere, has effected some of the most astonishing cures that were ever known. Many troubled with ringing in the ears and head when asleep, great nervounces, being alarmed at sudden sounds, and beshfulness, with frequent blushing, attended sometimes with derangement of mind, were cured immediately.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

GANIC WEAKNESS.

This grand and important Remedy has restored strength and vigor to thousands of the most debilitated individuals, many who had lost all hopes, and been abandoned to die, by its complete invigoration of the Nervous System, the whole faculties become restored to their proper power and fauctions, and the failen fabric of life is raised up to beauty. rencions, and the ration more of the is raised up to beauty consistency and duration, upon the ruins of an emaciated and premature decline, to sound and pristine health. He who places himself under the care of Dr. Johnston may religiously confide in his honor as a Gentleman, and confidently rely upon his skill as a Physician.

The many (housends cured at this institution within the last ten years, and the numerous important Surgical Operations performed by Dr. J., witnessed by the Reporters of the papers and many other persons, notices of which have appeared again and again before the public, is a sufficient guaranty that the afflicted will find a skifful and honorable physician.

TAKE NOTICE. TAKE NOTICE.

It is with the greatest reluctance that Dr. Johnston permits his card to appear before the public, deeming it unprofessional for a physician to advertise; but unless he did so, mits his card to appear before the public, deeming it unprofessional for a physician to advertise; but unless he did so, the afflicted, especially strangers, could not fail to fail into the hands of those impradent, boasting impostors—individuals destitute of knew ledge, name, and character—pediars, shoemakers, meshanics, £a., advertising themselves as physicians; ignorant quacks, who keep you trifling month after month, as long as possible, and in despair leave you with rained health to sigh over your galling disappointment. It is this motive alone that induces Dr. J. to advertise, for headone can care you. To those unacquainted with his reputation he deems it necessary to say, that his credentials or diplomas always hang in his Office.

Young Man's Counsellor,

SEVENTH EDITION.

No young man can read this work without profit. Its counsels are not only safe, but have an elevation and freshness which staps them to the present times. They show an intimate knowledge of even the most secret springs of human action. It is not a book of mere declaimation; the reader will find it profound as well as lively. We notifed the book with approbation on its first appearance, and we rejoice to know that, it has already reached its fifth edition.—Northern Christian Advocate.

What are the Whigs Contending For ! The Whigs are contending for American industry and the development of the resources of our own country. They wish to establish a policy which shall lead us to make those fabrics ourselves which we now obtain from abroad; which shall uphold the industrial pursuits of our own citizens, and not aim at supporting those of other countries, and which shall enable manufactures and all persons dependent upon them to com-pete with foreign labor. The Whigs contend for these objects; while Franklin Pierce and his party are opposing them. They believe that the immense deposits of coal, iron, lead, and copper in the United States are worthy of being worked, because American labor will thus be raid and American labor will thus be paid and American capital rewarded. They feel that this is of more importance to the coal digger and the iron worker, than the policy that would obtain all these articles from England, and thus neglect our own resources. It appears to them more reasonable and more patriotic to develope the resources of our own land than to assist complishing the prosperity of others. Franklin Pierce and his party thinks differently, and call

For Internal Improvement. They feel that the mprovement of the navigation of our rivers, for ourposes of internal commerce and facilities of intercourse, is a proper object for the government to undertake; that the improvement of our lake harbors is important to the growth and expansion of the Western States, and that whatever enriches one part enriches the whole; and that railway communications opened by government means will facilitate the settlement of the waste lands of the country, connect the different parts of the nation together, and increase the pros-these objects, while Frankin Free and an expension are opposed to them.

For the elevation of the people, socially, intellectually, and religiously. The Whigs are in favor of those measures that will preserve the nation at peace; that will keep it from encroaching upon ts weak neighbors; that will keep down the imnoral effects of the spread of the lust of conquest that will turn the attention of the community from the increase of dominions abroad, to the roduction of the greatest amount of happiness and good from the territories we now possess and that will make us an upright and educated people. The tendency of the measures of our opponents is the other way.

For the perpetuation of the Union'and the Constitution. To accomplish this most desirable object the Whigs are opposed to all sectional differences or agitations. They appreciate the blessings of the Union and realize the value of the Constitution, and will use their utmost endeavors to pre serve and perpetuate both. Finally, the Whigs are contending for a man who has been fighting for the country for forty years.— They wish to elevate to the supreme power a man who has done more for the nation than any other living man. He deserves the rewards which his grateful countrymen are about bestowing on him. There will be no hesitation in giving him these

The long continued and still increasing emigration from Ireland to this country, and the more recent current of emigration from England to Australia, are carrying off such crowds of the laboring classes that British manufacturers and capitalists are becoming alarmed at the prospect of an actual deficiency in the supply of labor for their mills. Hitherto if there should be any im-need of hands Ireland could always supply them,

The Times regarded such a result as something to be deprecated. "The institutions and customs of this country," it said, speaking of England, "are all adapted to the supposition of a vast difference of classes-a lower class, redundant, necessitous, ignorantl and manageable : an upper class, wealthy, exclusive, united, and powerful; and a middle class, struggling to emerge from the lower, and attach itself to the upper." It considered, therefore, that an inex-haustible supply of cheap labor had so long been a condition of the social system that any great enhancement of labor could not but work disturbances as well in the political as in the inhave been after one master so long that we are not prepared for the day when two masters will

We need not pause to comment upon a condition of things which makes the redundancy, the necessities and the ignorance of the largest class of the population a prerequisite for the very existence of a social and political system. It may of itself suggest reflections pertinent to the sub-

In the view of the increasing difficulty which appears to be growing daily, on account of the large emigration of laborers to America and Austrain, the British journals express a great deal of anxiety. The following is from the Daily News, as we find it quoted in the London correspondence of the National Intelligencer: Where are we to look for aid? We answer without hesitation, where we have found it often before, and are finding it at this moment-in the continent of Europe, in the population of Bel gium, Germany, and even France. Let it be once known that hands are wanted in this country, whether for the plough, the spindle, or the loom, and millions are ready to pour in from cities and villages almost within sight of these shores. We shall again see Saxons, Normans, and Flemings invading us, this time in peaceful array, and provoking no jealousy except among the idle and demoralized, who may wish to keep up a monopoly of labor, in order that they may themselves do no work at all. Already there are 20,000 Germans in this metropolis, and they are still on the increase. Here, then, is comfort to the capitalist and manufacturer, and comfort, we will add, to the institutions of the country, which would certainly be perilled by an excessive dimimution and consequent appreciation of our stock of labor. We may depend on it, in the old world we shall never live to see a want of hands. We have our difficulties, and shall still have them, but this is not one of them."

It does not seem to have occurred to this writer that emigration to America might take off the redundant population of Belgium and Germany, as well as that of England. The French are not much given to emigration to any country, and we presume would be inclined least of all to Great Britain, if they should emigrate in any numbers

The opponents of protection in this country may see, if they choose to look, the nature of that sort of competition to which they would subject American labor—leaving it naked and unequal terms, with the labor of a "lower class" a museum will probably be established.

But we cannot afford to have such a class in this country: our pelitical to have such a class in this country: our pelitical system, our republican institutions, the principle of self-government itself, which forms the foun-dation of our whole structure of government, forbid it. With us the degradation of labor would involve the degradation of society in all its departments, sooner or later. The Democracy of anti-protection has not yet learned, we may suppose, to perceive this.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS .- No. XVI.

By S. S. RANDALL.

The great practical problem which the teacher is called upon to solve is in what way, and through what means, the intellectual and moral faculties of his pupils may be so developed, cultivated, and directed as to render them subservient to the varied purposes of existence. That a particular method of mental culture has, in a given instance, or a given number of instances, been followed by a career of usefulness, honor, and happiness by no means authorizes him to conclude that a similar result will uni-formly, or even generally, follow from a repeti-tion of the process under other and different cirupon the community to uphold a policy that is building up English interests, that is rewarding tellectual and moral powers ix different individuals, so variously modified the elements of character, that it is next to impossible to lay down acter, that it is next to impossible to lay down any fixed rule which shall enable the educator to mould aright in all cases, the plastic energies of thought and action committed to his charge. Motives and inducements which operate powerfully and irresistably with one class of minds are found utterly impotent and inefficacious with another. Arguments and reasonings which address themselves at once to the comprehension and appreciation of one individual are urged in vain upon the understanding or the conscience of the other. In some minds the convictions of the moral sense preponderate over all the allureperity of every section. They contend for all these objects, while Franklin Pierce and his party tion with a well-balanced intellect, ensure a course of conduct in accordance with the dictates of enlightened reason and sound christianity; while in others, so feebly compacted are the barriers of moral restraint, and so active and energetic the vicious propensities, that the entire endency of the mental organization is reversed. In short, the mental constitution and tendency of no two individuals submitted to the teacher's care can be said to be the same; and the elementary discipline which is to prepare them for the great arena of life, with its duties, responsibilities, struggles, reverses, sufferings, and tri-umphs, must be infinitely diversified, in order to comprehend, with any degree of ultimate success, the innumerable varieties of disposition and tem-perament which are thus found to exist.

Nor should the important principle ever be for-gotten that moral education should be contempogenerated moral equivation should be contemporaneous and commensurate with intellectual progress. The great ideas of duty and responsibility, of truth, virtue, benevolence, and benezicence, should be kept constantly and clearly in view, reflected from the perfect mirror of christianity. irradiated by the strong light of immortality. The atmosphere of the school-room should be entirely free from the admixture of the baser in-gredients of passion, in any of their shapes or forms. The artiess innocence of childhood should there uniformly find a congenial field for the real-ization of its joyous hopes, its beaming anticipa-tions, its ardent desire for knowledge and ad-vancement. The law of love and of kindness, of disinterested regard for the welfare and happiness of others, should be enforced by all these considerations, derived from the natural and moral world, which are constantly present to the eye and to the mind; and not an incident affording an obvious and apt illustration of some valuable reoral lesson should be suffered to pass un-improved. Mildness and dignity of demeanor on part of the teacher, perfect self-possession but at present it would almost seem as though and perfect freedom from affectation, accompa-emigration from Ireland had taken the form of nied by the uniform manifestation of a kindly and n exodus of a whole people.

A year or more ago the London Times alluded and happiness of each individual committed to his

With this number the present series of articles on "OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS" is terminated. There are several other topices having a bearing on this subject which it was the original intention of the writer to have discussed—such as the best mode of supervision, the relative duties of parents, teachers, and school officers, public examinations, exhibitions, &c.; but, apprehensive of overtasking the patient indulgence of his readers, he has deemed it expedient to relieve them, at least for s season. If the public attention shall, in any degree, have been attracted by these numbers to the consideration of the important interests of dustrial sphere. "Two men," says the Times, elementary public instruction in our midst, he will have been amply compensated for the time spent in their preparation. WASHINGTON, OCTOBER, 1856.

No passion for luxury or display ought for a moment to tempt her to deviate in the least degree from this line of conduct. She will find her respectability in it. Any other course is wretchedness itself, and inevitably leads to ruin. Nothing can be more miserable than the struggle to keep up appearances. If it could succeed it would cost more than it is worth; as it never can, its failure involves the deepest mortification. Some of the sublimest exhibitions of human virtue have been precipitated suddenly from wealth and splendor to absolute want.
